A Conference Between the Heads of Two Great Corporations.

traffic lines, are gradually coming up through the ball ast of mystery under which they have beet bidden. Yesterday George W. Stevens, the new president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railread, accompanied by the first vice president, Lecaur Axtell, visited President S. M. Prevost, of the Pennsylvania Railread Company, at Broad street station.

None of these gentlemen vouchsafed any reason for the visitation of the new officers of the Southern line, but that there was more in it than a mere exchange of courtesies cannot be deubted, when one remembers that the Pennsylvania Railread has recently acquired large holdings in the Chesapeake and Ohio, and that it was tacitly understood that Mr. Cassatt was to have the appointing of the new president. This officer, it was thought, might be taken from Mr. Cassatt's immediate staff in the Pennsylvania but that he was not is no reason to suppose that Mr. Stevens is not Mr. Cassatt's appointee.

Following so closely the seating of Mr. Stevens this visit could handly be other.

The desert consists mostly of bowlders. There is no vegetation or water and this is the only time in the year when the desert can be crossed with safety, on account of the fierce heat. It is impossible to make progress by horseback on it, owing to the slippery condition of the sand. The Yaquis, who expected to cross the desert before the Mexicans got a starf and then fall on Guaymas, were handleapped by their herses and did not get far before the moon rose. The Mexicans were on the desert before the Yaquis had gone eight miles into it. The Mexicans made good progress, as they had no horses to lead, coming up with the Yaquis in the middle of the desert where the battle was fought at 8 o'clock in the merning of January 25. The Yaquis under Tenbento stood their ground by presenting a right front extending from bowlder to bowlder and placing parties on the projections. The horses were kept in a bunch away from the fire. The Mexicans suffered heavily while advancing upon the Yaquis and then came a hand-to-hand fight, for which the Mexicans were better equipped than their enemies. The conflict lasted three hours.

Edward Gladden. John Fisher, and William Martin, residents of the lower section of this city, narrowly escaped drowning in the waters of Aimstrong's Creek, situated about a half mile from their house, this morning.

The boys had been skating for some time, when they ventured along the lighter ice in the vicinity of the willows, which is but a short distance from the Delaware River front. Fisher broke through the ice and was soon floundering in seven feet of shilly water. Martin threw Fisher the end of his scarf, but before he could be of any assistance he was drawn into the icy water. The lads, who are about seventeen years of age, had presence of mind enough to hold onto the edges of the ice.

George Woodruff, a colored man, was driving along the causeway in a furniture wagon, and the cries of Gladdia called his attention to the danger of the two boys in the water.

At one point in the proceedings, Mr. Hoar said that it would be relevant to ask the witness about this treatment by which say being deprived of his parish at Buffelo Plains, has appealed for a trial.
